To the Military Council of The Empire, The Glass of the Heavens would like to make it known that the Empire has in its possession the Lantern of Ophis. She Who Watches has sent her heralds to speak to the Conclave and offer boons in return for the safe return of her Lantern. Not only did the Lantern not get returned but more items of the Unblinking Eye were stolen under her gaze. The Seer clad in Veils of Light has approached Guillamo de Tassato directly for return of her lantern, and given until the end of this evening to return the lantern in return for a powerful boon. The Thousand Eyes of Sun and Moon watch the Empire and watch their armies. Attached to this document are details of all the armies that be no more offers of boons for the return of what was stolen. The Glass of the Unblinking Eye looks down upon. Should the lantern not be returned by midnight tonight, then there will be no more information to the Jotun, the Grendal and the Drui, but the lantern is returned. She Who Watches is aware of the political power of the Military Council and hopes that where the Heavens does not wish to provide this information to the Jotun every season until the Concalve has failed they will succeed. Jor'sturetth, High Vizier of Kimus