

Harlequin,

Got an enquiry from a bigwig in Tassato, wants to send a couple of discrete representatives to a building site for a fancy schmancy new retreat in Highguard (Chalcis Mount, Reikos) she's sponsoring - apparently they dug something up and it's turned into a treasure hunt or something. Either way it's hugely behind schedule & the client's not seeing any return on investment. They've also had increased budget requests from the delay & apparently there's been a lot of accidents & compensation claims - so something's fishy.

There's a bit of a party to celebrate whatever they've found - client wants a couple of representatives to attend, have a sniff about & discretely remind sponsor of responsibilities. Client wants an idea of if finds are worth anything (with a view to appropriately displaying in the right museum, obviously...). They've also insisted that as it's a party, behave appropriately, so make sure whoever goes behaves themselves. Absolutely no weapons, no violence. Client's very insistent on that - I mean it, no wink-wink nudge-nudge accidentally-falling-down-some-stairs, NO violence. Client says be creative, threaten financial ruin, release of secrets, whatever, but kneecaps isn't how she rolls. She's a type that rewards creativity, so might be a bonus if they impress her.

Anyway, I'm in more of the import-export business as you know, so throwing you the bone. Friday, 11.15 conjunction of the Gate to the site (Dig Site, Chalcis Mount, Reikos), 2 of your finest, no fighting, usual cut? Payment enclosed for the ~~works~~ subcontractors. Tell 'em to send any reports back via yourself & I'll relay to the client.

Mercurio di Sarvos