

Yaroslav,

If what you tell us is true, and the Imperial Generals have disregarded a boon from the Silent Kingdom and slighted the winner of the trials. Exquy and Ossuary are not well pleased.

Therefore they have persuaded The Hungry Wolf to offer the following.

To remove any time limit from using the boon. It shall last until the Empire require it, at the choosing of Maya or those in her trust.

The Hungry Wolf is also persuaded to offer her options, if she does not wish to continue bearing the curses she took to earn the boon.

If she wishes, a Herald will visit Anvil after lunchtime on Sunday. It will be able to do either – or indeed both – of these things.

It could cast a ritual which would make her the bearer of a pronouncement of doom, which will give her 15 minutes to curse someone she believes deserves it. That pronouncement can be shaped to carry either of the curses she is currently under.

It could cast the curses she is under on another Imperial citizen who is willing to endure them.

If Maya chooses either of these options the Herald will also end the curses on her, if she so wishes, whilst leaving the boon intact.

Ania of Necropolis