

Greetings,

My name is Maistir Comyn, of the Doyals of Vorkach. I've been in Calvos the last week and change, and I've visited the finely-restored Kraken's Bane and taken in a lecture at the Seminary of Zemress. Rest assured that I have nothing but respect for the great hero Zemress!

Ah, but my pilgrimage has two sides, of course. I'm sure by now you've heard that I'm carrying a pair of relics which once belonged to Zemress herself. The cup was a gift, so it's said, from her to a trading-partner in Vorkach. The finger was not obtained so peacefully - but that's a tale I'll tell you in person.

I mean to sell these artefacts. I want to hire a host and their parador for a chunk of Saturday afternoon at Anvil. I also want Freeborn guards for the occasion. I will trust to your people's honesty and fidelity to keep me safe - a gesture which I hope will reassure you of mine.

I'll be attending early on Friday evening, without the artefacts themselves, to make the necessary arrangements: hiring a parador, and guards to attend it with me.

I am happy for the relics to be checked using magic, but I'm sure you understand they can't leave my presence.

On a final note: I'm looking to sell something I have a lot of personal respect for. If I feel the Freeborn are slighting me - if a seat at your table costs the proverbial Throne, if your scrivener is sneaking in clauses I don't like - then the Sumaash would appreciate true relics of an Exemplar just as well. For that matter, so would the Asaveans. I come to you first out of respect, and I expect respect in return. No matter what might have passed between our peoples recently.

I look forward to our meeting,

GOQYN DOVAL

Greetings,

My name is Maistir Comyn, of the Doyals of Vorlach. I've been in Calvos the last week and change, and I've visited the finely-restored Kraken's Bane and taken in a lecture at the Seminary of Zemress. Rest assured that I have nothing but respect for the great hero Zemress!

Ah, but my pilgrimage has two sides, of course. I'm sure by now you've heard that I'm carrying a pair of relics which once belonged to Zemress herself. The cup was a gift, so it's said, from her to a trading-partner in Vorlach. The finger was not obtained so peacefully - but that's a tale I'll tell you in person.

I mean to sell these artefacts. I want to hire a host and their parador for a chunk of Saturday afternoon at Anvil. I also want Freeborn guards for the occasion. I will trust to your people's honesty and fidelity to keep me safe - a gesture which I hope will reassure you of mine.

I'll be attending early on Friday evening, without the artefacts themselves, to make the necessary arrangements: hiring a parador, and guards to attend it with me.

I am happy for the relics to be checked using magic, but I'm sure you understand they can't leave my presence.

On a final note: I'm looking to sell something I have a lot of personal respect for. If I feel the Freeborn are slighting me - if a seat at your table costs the proverbial Throne, if your scrivener is sneaking in clauses I don't like - then the Sumaash would appreciate true relics of an Exemplar just as well. For that matter, so would the Asaveans. I come to you first out of respect, and I expect respect in return. No matter what might have passed between our peoples recently.

I look forward to our meeting,

GOQYN DOVAL

Greetings,

My name is Maistir Comyn, of the Doyals of Vorkach. I've been in Calvos the last week and change, and I've visited the finely-restored Kraken's Bane and taken in a lecture at the Seminary of Zemress. Rest assured that I have nothing but respect for the great hero Zemress!

Ah, but my pilgrimage has two sides, of course. I'm sure by now you've heard that I'm carrying a pair of relics which once belonged to Zemress herself. The cup was a gift, so it's said, from her to a trading-partner in Vorkach. The finger was not obtained so peacefully - but that's a tale I'll tell you in person.

I mean to sell these artefacts. I want to hire a host and their parador for a chunk of Saturday afternoon at Anvil. I also want Freeborn guards for the occasion. I will trust to your people's honesty and fidelity to keep me safe - a gesture which I hope will reassure you of mine.

I'll be attending early on Friday evening, without the artefacts themselves, to make the necessary arrangements: hiring a parador, and guards to attend it with me.

I am happy for the relics to be checked using magic, but I'm sure you understand they can't leave my presence.

On a final note: I'm looking to sell something I have a lot of personal respect for. If I feel the Freeborn are slighting me - if a seat at your table costs the proverbial Throne, if your scrivener is sneaking in clauses I don't like - then the Sumaash would appreciate true relics of an Exemplar just as well. For that matter, so would the Asaveans. I come to you first out of respect, and I expect respect in return. No matter what might have passed between our peoples recently.

I look forward to our meeting,

GOOMYN DOYAL

Greetings,

My name is Maistir Comyn, of the Doyals of Vorkach. I've been in Calvos the last week and change, and I've visited the finely-restored Kraken's Bane and taken in a lecture at the Seminary of Zemress. Rest assured that I have nothing but respect for the great hero Zemress!

Ah, but my pilgrimage has two sides, of course. I'm sure by now you've heard that I'm carrying a pair of relics which once belonged to Zemress herself. The cup was a gift, so it's said, from her to a trading-partner in Vorkach. The finger was not obtained so peacefully - but that's a tale I'll tell you in person.

I mean to sell these artefacts. I want to hire a host and their parador for a chunk of Saturday afternoon at Anvil. I also want Freeborn guards for the occasion. I will trust to your people's honesty and fidelity to keep me safe - a gesture which I hope will reassure you of mine.

I'll be attending early on Friday evening, without the artefacts themselves, to make the necessary arrangements: hiring a parador, and guards to attend it with me.

I am happy for the relics to be checked using magic, but I'm sure you understand they can't leave my presence.

On a final note: I'm looking to sell something I have a lot of personal respect for. If I feel the Freeborn are slighting me - if a seat at your table costs the proverbial Throne, if your scrivener is sneaking in clauses I don't like - then the Sumaash would appreciate true relics of an Exemplar just as well. For that matter, so would the Asaveans. I come to you first out of respect, and I expect respect in return. No matter what might have passed between our peoples recently.

I look forward to our meeting,

GOOMYN DOVAL

Greetings,

My name is Maistir Comyn, of the Doyals of Vorlach. I've been in Calvos the last week and change, and I've visited the finely-restored Kraken's Bane and taken in a lecture at the Seminary of Zemress. Rest assured that I have nothing but respect for the great hero Zemress!

Ah, but my pilgrimage has two sides, of course. I'm sure by now you've heard that I'm carrying a pair of relics which once belonged to Zemress herself. The cup was a gift, so it's said, from her to a trading-partner in Vorlach. The finger was not obtained so peacefully - but that's a tale I'll tell you in person.

I mean to sell these artefacts. I want to hire a host and their parador for a chunk of Saturday afternoon at Anvil. I also want Freeborn guards for the occasion. I will trust to your people's honesty and fidelity to keep me safe - a gesture which I hope will reassure you of mine.

I'll be attending early on Friday evening, without the artefacts themselves, to make the necessary arrangements: hiring a parador, and guards to attend it with me.

I am happy for the relics to be checked using magic, but I'm sure you understand they can't leave my presence.

On a final note: I'm looking to sell something I have a lot of personal respect for. If I feel the Freeborn are slighting me - if a seat at your table costs the proverbial Throne, if your scrivener is sneaking in clauses I don't like - then the Sumaash would appreciate true relics of an Exemplar just as well. For that matter, so would the Asaveans. I come to you first out of respect, and I expect respect in return. No matter what might have passed between our peoples recently.

I look forward to our meeting,

GOQYN DOVAL

Greetings,

My name is Maistir Comyn, of the Doyals of Vorkach. I've been in Calvos the last week and change, and I've visited the finely-restored Kraken's Bane and taken in a lecture at the Seminary of Zemress. Rest assured that I have nothing but respect for the great hero Zemress!

Ah, but my pilgrimage has two sides, of course. I'm sure by now you've heard that I'm carrying a pair of relics which once belonged to Zemress herself. The cup was a gift, so it's said, from her to a trading-partner in Vorkach. The finger was not obtained so peacefully - but that's a tale I'll tell you in person.

I mean to sell these artefacts. I want to hire a host and their parador for a chunk of Saturday afternoon at Anvil. I also want Freeborn guards for the occasion. I will trust to your people's honesty and fidelity to keep me safe - a gesture which I hope will reassure you of mine.

I'll be attending early on Friday evening, without the artefacts themselves, to make the necessary arrangements: hiring a parador, and guards to attend it with me.

I am happy for the relics to be checked using magic, but I'm sure you understand they can't leave my presence.

On a final note: I'm looking to sell something I have a lot of personal respect for. If I feel the Freeborn are slighting me - if a seat at your table costs the proverbial Throne, if your scrivener is sneaking in clauses I don't like - then the Sumaash would appreciate true relics of an Exemplar just as well. For that matter, so would the Asaveans. I come to you first out of respect, and I expect respect in return. No matter what might have passed between our peoples recently.

I look forward to our meeting,

GOQYN DOVAL

Greetings,

My name is Maistir Comyn, of the Doyals of Vorkach. I've been in Calvos the last week and change, and I've visited the finely-restored Kraken's Bane and taken in a lecture at the Seminary of Zemress. Rest assured that I have nothing but respect for the great hero Zemress!

Ah, but my pilgrimage has two sides, of course. I'm sure by now you've heard that I'm carrying a pair of relics which once belonged to Zemress herself. The cup was a gift, so it's said, from her to a trading-partner in Vorkach. The finger was not obtained so peacefully - but that's a tale I'll tell you in person.

I mean to sell these artefacts. I want to hire a host and their parador for a chunk of Saturday afternoon at Anvil. I also want Freeborn guards for the occasion. I will trust to your people's honesty and fidelity to keep me safe - a gesture which I hope will reassure you of mine.

I'll be attending early on Friday evening, without the artefacts themselves, to make the necessary arrangements: hiring a parador, and guards to attend it with me.

I am happy for the relics to be checked using magic, but I'm sure you understand they can't leave my presence.

On a final note: I'm looking to sell something I have a lot of personal respect for. If I feel the Freeborn are slighting me - if a seat at your table costs the proverbial Throne, if your scrivener is sneaking in clauses I don't like - then the Sumaash would appreciate true relics of an Exemplar just as well. For that matter, so would the Asaveans. I come to you first out of respect, and I expect respect in return. No matter what might have passed between our peoples recently.

I look forward to our meeting,

GOOMYN DOYAL

Greetings,

My name is Maistir Comyn, of the Doyals of Vorkach. I've been in Calvos the last week and change, and I've visited the finely-restored Kraken's Bane and taken in a lecture at the Seminary of Zemress. Rest assured that I have nothing but respect for the great hero Zemress!

Ah, but my pilgrimage has two sides, of course. I'm sure by now you've heard that I'm carrying a pair of relics which once belonged to Zemress herself. The cup was a gift, so it's said, from her to a trading-partner in Vorkach. The finger was not obtained so peacefully - but that's a tale I'll tell you in person.

I mean to sell these artefacts. I want to hire a host and their parador for a chunk of Saturday afternoon at Anvil. I also want Freeborn guards for the occasion. I will trust to your people's honesty and fidelity to keep me safe - a gesture which I hope will reassure you of mine.

I'll be attending early on Friday evening, without the artefacts themselves, to make the necessary arrangements: hiring a parador, and guards to attend it with me.

I am happy for the relics to be checked using magic, but I'm sure you understand they can't leave my presence.

On a final note: I'm looking to sell something I have a lot of personal respect for. If I feel the Freeborn are slighting me - if a seat at your table costs the proverbial Throne, if your scrivener is sneaking in clauses I don't like - then the Sumaash would appreciate true relics of an Exemplar just as well. For that matter, so would the Asaveans. I come to you first out of respect, and I expect respect in return. No matter what might have passed between our peoples recently.

I look forward to our meeting,

GOOMYN DOVAL

Greetings,

My name is Maistir Comyn, of the Doyals of Vorkach. I've been in Calvos the last week and change, and I've visited the finely-restored Kraken's Bane and taken in a lecture at the Seminary of Zemress. Rest assured that I have nothing but respect for the great hero Zemress!

Ah, but my pilgrimage has two sides, of course. I'm sure by now you've heard that I'm carrying a pair of relics which once belonged to Zemress herself. The cup was a gift, so it's said, from her to a trading-partner in Vorkach. The finger was not obtained so peacefully - but that's a tale I'll tell you in person.

I mean to sell these artefacts. I want to hire a host and their parador for a chunk of Saturday afternoon at Anvil. I also want Freeborn guards for the occasion. I will trust to your people's honesty and fidelity to keep me safe - a gesture which I hope will reassure you of mine.

I'll be attending early on Friday evening, without the artefacts themselves, to make the necessary arrangements: hiring a parador, and guards to attend it with me.

I am happy for the relics to be checked using magic, but I'm sure you understand they can't leave my presence.

On a final note: I'm looking to sell something I have a lot of personal respect for. If I feel the Freeborn are slighting me - if a seat at your table costs the proverbial Throne, if your scrivener is sneaking in clauses I don't like - then the Sumaash would appreciate true relics of an Exemplar just as well. For that matter, so would the Asaveans. I come to you first out of respect, and I expect respect in return. No matter what might have passed between our peoples recently.

I look forward to our meeting,

GOOMYN DOVAL

Greetings,

My name is Maistir Comyn, of the Doyals of Vorkach. I've been in Calvos the last week and change, and I've visited the finely-restored Kraken's Bane and taken in a lecture at the Seminary of Zemress. Rest assured that I have nothing but respect for the great hero Zemress!

Ah, but my pilgrimage has two sides, of course. I'm sure by now you've heard that I'm carrying a pair of relics which once belonged to Zemress herself. The cup was a gift, so it's said, from her to a trading-partner in Vorkach. The finger was not obtained so peacefully - but that's a tale I'll tell you in person.

I mean to sell these artefacts. I want to hire a host and their parador for a chunk of Saturday afternoon at Anvil. I also want Freeborn guards for the occasion. I will trust to your people's honesty and fidelity to keep me safe - a gesture which I hope will reassure you of mine.

I'll be attending early on Friday evening, without the artefacts themselves, to make the necessary arrangements: hiring a parador, and guards to attend it with me.

I am happy for the relics to be checked using magic, but I'm sure you understand they can't leave my presence.

On a final note: I'm looking to sell something I have a lot of personal respect for. If I feel the Freeborn are slighting me - if a seat at your table costs the proverbial Throne, if your scrivener is sneaking in clauses I don't like - then the Sumaash would appreciate true relics of an Exemplar just as well. For that matter, so would the Asaveans. I come to you first out of respect, and I expect respect in return. No matter what might have passed between our peoples recently.

I look forward to our meeting,

GOOMYN DOYAL