

The following letter was awaiting you upon your arrival at Anvil.

Senator,

It is a great source of pleasure that I write to you for the first time from land I can consider home: where previously I was a beggar upon another's estate, I - and all the true sons and daughters of Marracossa - may finally look from the present and to the future.

It is particularly appreciated that your efforts progressed at a pace that outstripped the attempts of the Asavean Ambassador to whom we had previously entrusted our business. The work of those servitors of state sent to finalise the arrangements in Trajadoz have, to my understanding, progressed quickly and smoothly - likely aided by our year of fruitless preparations.

*As agreed a year ago, three examples of Marracossa's peerless artisanship shall exclusively be produced for the holder of the title of Sendita. In particular the Raptis Hook, the Fork of Ichos and the Night Mirror of Pavlus were chosen, all those months ago, as being the designs desired by your Empire.*

So, let us look to a shared future in this, a delayed new beginning. It is the hope of the people I represent that this is a first step towards a brighter future of mutual 'Prosperity'.

- Glaucia Herminia, Legate of Marracossa Trajadoz, Madruza.

Also, please extend my appreciation and respect to the Senator for Segura who seconded you in the Senate - we of Marracossa recognize loyalty.
