

Greetings to Lukash von Temeshwar, Ambassador from the Empire of Lisabetta von Holberg to the Iron Confederacy. I, Aubrietta du Matagot, Knight Commander of the Order of Arav's Arrow, issue you with the following report.

I was pleased to note that the Templars under my command who were sent to retrieve the head of the blasphemous sorcerer Morgan du Moreau were treated well and received your co-operation. I admit that I expected little from your Empire and thought that my knights would face obstruction at best. I am glad to be proved wrong in this matter.

The head was passed on to the priesthood of Most Holy Surann and disposed of in the correct and most sacred manner. My soldiers informed me that you wanted the ashes of the head in order to confirm that the deed has been done, and so you will find a pouch of the ashes in this package. If you genuinely wish to see this monstrous man's end to reassure yourself, then I commend you on your wisdom. If you would seek to work some sort of witchery to draw on his power, then you are a fool whose schemes will come to nothing, but I trust that is not the case.

Once you are done with the ashes, scatter them far and wide - into the sea, if you can. Even in death, a sorcerer like Morgan still holds power. Leave nothing that a ghost or echo of his sins might seek anchor in.

Do not send one of your sorcerous witch-hawks to deliver any response to this report. I do not want to be sullied with such darkness. You may communicate your words to Jean de Hiberna as normal, for she is prepared and sanctified for such a task.
