The last few nights your dreams have been disturbed and your thoughts drawn to the Heart of the Tempest. The slow creeping tendrils seem to be reaching out across the earth, devouring everything in their path. You see the tendrils creeping out across Varushka, destroying vales and covering the land.

A golden hare tries to get past the tendrils, leaping past them or burrowing into the ground to wait for them to pass and then jumping up to bound forwards. Every night you see the hare attempt to get into the Heart of the Tempest, every night the hare eventually tires, and the tendrils constrict around the hare choking it to death.

The final night before the Winter Solstice, the dream is slightly different. The hare stops and looks at you, you pick it up and make the journey into the Heart of the Tempest yourself, avoiding the tendrils or hacking at them with a small hatchet if they get too close.

When you get inside the Heart of the Tempest there is a burst of golden light and the tendrils suddenly start to wither and shrink back into the temple.

OOO Information:

Although unable to help you directly, the Prince with a thousand foes, is trying to tell you something, and this seems to be to do with the Heart of the Tempest.

The Varushkan Egregores will be able to tell you if there are any conjunctions to the Heart of the Tempest. They will also be able to tell you the size of the conjunctions and whether it is suitable for you if you have accessibility or health concerns.
