

Imperial Civil Service Report

Subject: ..... Sejanus of Shatterspire's True Liao Vision.....

Report: .....As directed, I have been looking into the past life vision received by Sejanus Shatterspire of Urizen

.....We have been able to find some references to an Anion Sunspire, who lived during the reign of Emperor Nicovar, and who we believe to be the Vicionary's past-life.

..... Records from the period are understandably incomplete due to the destruction wrought in the latter part of Nicovar's reign. However, we uncovered anecdotal evidence regarding a highly-reputed Day Mage, believed to be one of the most puissant seers of that generation; the aforementioned Anion Sunspire. .....

.....According to more than one anecdotal account, Anion served the Empire as Archmage of Day for approximately two Imperial Summits. In her final address before stepping down, Anion is reported to have said, "I serve the Empire best through providing illumination and clarity, which I cannot find within this Conclave. ” .....

..... Influential citizens of the period are reported to have sought out Anion for her particular insights and ability to help them solve their problems. Allegedly, Anion made a prosperous living as a private citizen with a moderate coven of Day mages; mostly Merrow, like Anion. ....

..... There is no record, rumour or story that we could dig up that details Anion specifically working for Emperor Nicovar directly. However, we did not expect to find any such. There were accounts of Anion taking an active interest in the works of an individual called Malachy, an individual alleged to be a prophet, and whose works were allegedly stored at the library of Ankarien. Regrettably, it seems that Malachy never attained the level of notoriety as Abraxus, or perhaps Emperor Nicovar made a more concerted effort to destroy Malachy's corpus. Either way, we have no record of any of Malachy's prophecies, unless they are in a private collection or other non-

..... I hope that this report satisfies the visionary as to the veracity of their vision, and some further insight to the person we believe to be the Visionary's past life. ....
