

To Cormack Dun, of the Oathwright

I'm sorry, I didn't know who else to contact about this, and I figured maybe you were my best shot. Gives you a chance to serve the people!

I'm a grocer based in Sarvos - maybe you've heard of me? I sell the best kumquats in the bay of Catazar. Anyway, I have a regular contract with the Alvetti Estate. I'm not sure how familiar you are with the City of Masks, but the Estate actually belongs to the Sarcophan Delves. It's in a bit of the city that floods regularly, and I guess that helps it feel like home for them?

While I was delivering for them yesterday, one of the kitchen staff complained that I hadn't brought the extra limes they'd ordered for the guests. A ridiculous claim - I've never made a mistake in my books. A bit of digging revealed that the Estate plan to host a handful of Imperial and Jarmish guests over the spring equinox.

Obviously this news pricked my interest, so I asked around my other contacts close by the Estate. They said a Jarmish magician prince has got their hands on a vial of true liao, and is sending a couple of family members to the Alvetti Estate to meet with some Imperial traitors who are gonna help them have a true liao vision.

I didn't know what else to do but to write to you. Is this some grand conspiracy being hidden from the ordinary folk like me? I have had no chance to inform my senator on my feelings about this! Surely, there should be some discussion before such a valuable, virtuous honour is given to JARM of all places?

I look forward to reading any article you produce on this horrifying matter.

Yours in freshness,

Davi di Laranja di Sarvos

To Arturo di Sarvos, of the Inkwell,

I'm sorry, I didn't know who else to contact about this, and I figured maybe you were my best shot. Gives you a chance to serve the people!

I'm a grocer based in Sarvos - maybe you've heard of me? I sell the best kumquats in the bay of Catazar. Anyway, I have a regular contract with the Alvetti Estate. I'm not sure how familiar you are with this are of the city, but the Estate actually belongs to the Sarcophan Delves. It's in a bit of Sarvos that floods regularly, and I guess that helps it feel like home for them?

While I was delivering for them yesterday, one of the kitchen staff complained that I hadn't brought the extra limes they'd ordered for the guests. A ridiculous claim - I've never made a mistake in my books. A bit of digging revealed that the Estate plan to host a handful of Imperial and Jarmish guests over the spring equinox.

Obviously this news pricked my interest, so I asked around my other contacts close by the Estate. They said a Jarmish magician prince has got their hands on a vial of true liao, and is sending a couple of family members to the Alvetti Estate to meet with some Imperial traitors who are gonna help them have a true liao vision.

I didn't know what else to do but to write to you. Is this some grand conspiracy being hidden from the ordinary folk like me? I have had no chance to inform my senator on my feelings about this! Surely, there should be some discussion before such a valuable, virtuous honour is given to JARM of all places?

I look forward to reading any article you produce on this horrifying matter.

Yours in freshness,

Davi di Laranja di Sarvos

To Bakar, Amaranta, Iñez and Raza, of the Quay,

I'm sorry, I didn't know who else to contact about this, and I figured maybe you were my best shot. Gives you a chance to serve the people!

I'm a grocer based in Sarvos - maybe you've heard of me? I sell the best kumquats in the bay of Catazar. Anyway, I have a regular contract with the Alvetti Estate. I'm not sure how familiar you are with the City of Masks, but the Estate actually belongs to the Sarcophan Delves. It's in a bit of the city that floods regularly, and I guess that helps it feel like home for them?

While I was delivering for them yesterday, one of the kitchen staff complained that I hadn't brought the extra limes they'd ordered for the guests. A ridiculous claim - I've never made a mistake in my books. A bit of digging revealed that the Estate plan to host a handful of Imperial and Jarmish guests over the spring equinox.

Obviously this news pricked my interest, so I asked around my other contacts close by the Estate. They said a Jarmish magician prince has got their hands on a vial of true liao, and is sending a couple of family members to the Alvetti Estate to meet with some Imperial traitors who are gonna help them have a true liao vision.

I didn't know what else to do but to write to you. Is this some grand conspiracy being hidden from the ordinary folk like me? I have had no chance to inform my senator on my feelings about this! Surely, there should be some discussion before such a valuable, virtuous honour is given to JARM of all places?

I look forward to reading any article you produce on this horrifying matter.

Yours in freshness,

Davi di Laranja di Sarvos

To Conn, of the Reckoning

I'm sorry, I didn't know who else to contact about this, and I figured maybe you were my best shot. Gives you a chance to serve the people!

I'm a grocer based in Sarvos - maybe you've heard of me? I sell the best kumquats in the bay of Catazar. Anyway, I have a regular contract with the Alvetti Estate. I'm not sure how familiar you are with the City of Masks, but the Estate actually belongs to the Sarcophan Delves. It's in a bit of the city that floods regularly, and I guess that helps it feel like home for them?

While I was delivering for them yesterday, one of the kitchen staff complained that I hadn't brought the extra limes they'd ordered for the guests. A ridiculous claim - I've never made a mistake in my books. A bit of digging revealed that the Estate plan to host a handful of Imperial and Jarmish guests over the spring equinox.

Obviously this news pricked my interest, so I asked around my other contacts close by the Estate. They said a Jarmish magician prince has got their hands on a vial of true liao, and is sending a couple of family members to the Alvetti Estate to meet with some Imperial traitors who are gonna help them have a true liao vision.

I didn't know what else to do but to write to you. Is this some grand conspiracy being hidden from the ordinary folk like me? I have had no chance to inform my senator on my feelings about this! Surely, there should be some discussion before such a valuable, virtuous honour is given to JARM of all places?

I look forward to reading any article you produce on this horrifying matter.

Yours in freshness,

Davi di Laranja di Sarvos

To Theodric, and those working on your new publication,

I'm sorry, I didn't know who else to contact about this, and I figured maybe you were my best shot. Gives you a chance to serve the people!

I'm a grocer based in Sarvos - maybe you've heard of me? I sell the best kumquats in the bay of Catazar. Anyway, I have a regular contract with the Alvetti Estate. I'm not sure how familiar you are with the City of Masks, but the Estate actually belongs to the Sarcophan Delves. It's in a bit of the city that floods regularly, and I guess that helps it feel like home for them?

While I was delivering for them yesterday, one of the kitchen staff complained that I hadn't brought the extra limes they'd ordered for the guests. A ridiculous claim - I've never made a mistake in my books. A bit of digging revealed that the Estate plan to host a handful of Imperial and Jarmish guests over the spring equinox.

Obviously this news pricked my interest, so I asked around my other contacts close by the Estate. They said a Jarmish magician prince has got their hands on a vial of true liao, and is sending a couple of family members to the Alvetti Estate to meet with some Imperial traitors who are gonna help them have a true liao vision.

I didn't know what else to do but to write to you. Is this some grand conspiracy being hidden from the ordinary folk like me? I have had no chance to inform my senator on my feelings about this! Surely, there should be some discussion before such a valuable, virtuous honour is given to JARM of all places?

I look forward to reading any article you produce on this horrifying matter.

Yours in freshness,

Davi di Laranja di Sarvos

To Eamon, Arlen + Aunty Black Night, of the Dawnish Herald,

I'm sorry, I didn't know who else to contact about this, and I figured maybe you were my best shot. Gives you a chance to serve the people!

I'm a grocer based in Sarvos - maybe you've heard of me? I sell the best kumquats in the bay of Catazar. Anyway, I have a regular contract with the Alvetti Estate. I'm not sure how familiar you are with the City of Masks, but the Estate actually belongs to the Sarcophan Delves. It's in a bit of the city that floods regularly, and I guess that helps it feel like home for them?

While I was delivering for them yesterday, one of the kitchen staff complained that I hadn't brought the extra limes they'd ordered for the guests. A ridiculous claim - I've never made a mistake in my books. A bit of digging revealed that the Estate plan to host a handful of Imperial and Jarmish guests over the spring equinox.

Obviously this news pricked my interest, so I asked around my other contacts close by the Estate. They said a Jarmish magician prince has got their hands on a vial of true liao, and is sending a couple of family members to the Alvetti Estate to meet with some Imperial traitors who are gonna help them have a true liao vision.

I didn't know what else to do but to write to you. Is this some grand conspiracy being hidden from the ordinary folk like me? I have had no chance to inform my senator on my feelings about this! Surely, there should be some discussion before such a valuable, virtuous honour is given to JARM of all places?

I look forward to reading any article you produce on this horrifying matter.

Yours in freshness,

Davi di Laranja di Sarvos

To Carlos i Navigator of Virtue i Guerra, of the Bastion Thunderer,

I'm sorry, I didn't know who else to contact about this, and I figured maybe you were my best shot. Gives you a chance to serve the people!

I'm a grocer based in Sarvos - maybe you've heard of me? I sell the best kumquats in the bay of Catazar. Anyway, I have a regular contract with the Alvetti Estate. I'm not sure how familiar you are with the City of Masks, but the Estate actually belongs to the Sarcophan Delves. It's in a bit of the city that floods regularly, and I guess that helps it feel like home for them?

While I was delivering for them yesterday, one of the kitchen staff complained that I hadn't brought the extra limes they'd ordered for the guests. A ridiculous claim - I've never made a mistake in my books. A bit of digging revealed that the Estate plan to host a handful of Imperial and Jarmish guests over the spring equinox.

Obviously this news pricked my interest, so I asked around my other contacts close by the Estate. They said a Jarmish magician prince has got their hands on a vial of true liao, and is sending a couple of family members to the Alvetti Estate to meet with some Imperial traitors who are gonna help them have a true liao vision.

I didn't know what else to do but to write to you. Is this some grand conspiracy being hidden from the ordinary folk like me? I have had no chance to inform my senator on my feelings about this! Surely, there should be some discussion before such a valuable, virtuous honour is given to JARM of all places?

I look forward to reading any article you produce on this horrifying matter.

Yours in freshness,

Davi di Laranja di Sarvos