

The dreams in the last few weeks before your journey to anvil have been unusual. You have found yourself waking early with a blinding light in your eyes and hearing a clear voice speak to you.

Although the actual words are hazy in your memory, you remember that the greeted you by name and referred to you as a priest (or a culturally appropriate word for that).

The voice asked you to help it find the strongest of the Sects, and to join that Sect. This will allow Sinokenon to strengthen that bond and allow it to be an example to the other Sects across the nation. It needs your help and had given you the enchantments to do that job.

You start to get up in your dream, but then everything fades to black again and when you wake you find you were still in bed.

Role-playing Effect if applicable:

Feel free to embellish this dream as much as you want. It may have been long or it may have been very short, but the dreams should have been personal to you.

Mechanical Effect: if applicable:

You are also under an enchantment.

“Favour of Sinokenon: One per day may create a bond as if they had cast the create bond spell (requires at least ten seconds of appropriate roleplaying).”

You may only be under one enchantment so this enchantment will be removed if you have another enchantment cast upon you..