Comments: ... When my eyes opened again, I found myself kneeling by a bedside. Looking around, the décor had the all hallmarks of Urizen, as did the clothing of the man lying in the bed, and the sentinel standing watch over him. Bishop Vanetti tells me that he saw documentation on a desk that indicated we were at Auric Horizon Spire, but there was nothing that indicated when. ....
.....The man in the bed groaned, and the sentinel said that it would not be long now. I remember asking if I could do anything for him, and I was told that nothing comforted him like the presence of his wife.....
.....Suddenly, the man in the bed bolted straight upright with an expression of unbridled horror upon his face. He gripped my arm so tightly that, despite being a dream or vision, I swear I felt it hurt. ....
.....Then, he stared me directly in the eyes, though I was not sure he was truly seeing me, and he said "It grows from within us!". Then he collapsed and died.
..... The vision faded then, but it is by belief that I, in my past life, I was Jesebel, the wife of Abraxus the Prophet.....
