

Over the last season you have been having strange dreams, you are a mystic, your dreams are not always predictable, but these have been stranger than many. Although your dreams are personal, and like many, are affected by what you do in your day and what is on your mind, there seem to be running themes through these dreams.

The Butterfly

The Butterfly is a recurring theme in your dreams. Sometimes it is seeing them, sometimes it is you yourself who has emerged from a cocoon. This obviously symbolises some sort of personal change.

Fire

Fire is a recurring theme, but not heat. This is not a destructive force, you do not awake feeling burnt from this fire, but it is the flame in the hearth in your hall, it is the torch that lights the way, it is the campfire in the middle of the woods.

Books

Your dreams seem to have books in them. Often opening up great tomes to find something inside. Not words, sometimes a butterfly, sometimes a fire, sometimes yourself. Sometimes it is a great spell, or an ancient text. Books should represent learning, but also discovery.

Feel free to remember as much or as little of your dreams as you prefer, and feel free to elaborate. These are recurring themes, but what you dream is up to you.