

Wilda,

I am writing on behalf of the Iron Duke, before I leave Anvil on this Friday evening, I have not found you, but have found one to send one of those messages that the Autumn Realm use that I hope will reach you.

I return to Anvil on Sunday, The Lord of the Crossroads would be pleased to hear how many items those named in the Challenge the Iron Duke for the Icewalkers have collected towards their goals, which realms they have covered so far. I will visit Lumi's in the last hours of the gathering to speak with them.

In case they should have forgotten their challenge is to acquire one storied item from each of the six realms. Summer approaches, but they still have time.

I met briefly with one of their number, Magni of Hunters Hall, and both he and I were confused –and I confess to some bureaucratic muddling which meant I could not identify the challenge he was part of easily.

The Iron Duke's Challenge still stands, a brazier of coals to aid in the building of a runeforge – their strength and power dependent on how many of the realms the Icewalkers have succeeded in acquiring gifts from.

And of course if that number is too low, the threat that no Icewalkers may Challenge the Keeper again for a generation.

Will you apologise to Magni on his behalf that I did not find him again this night, praise his enthusiasm, and give him this list – of the Icewalkers who were named at the time of the challenge.

I hope that one of them at least among them can show him the scroll and speak of progress so far.

I appreciate your assistance

Revel on behalf of the Keeper of the Crossroads, The Master of the Forge, The Iron Duke himself.
