

During the Summer Solstice your spire invited a group called the Whispering Drays to stay at your spire while they learnt about the Urizen as part of their attempt to join your nation.

Following your invitation for them to guest with you for a season, a group of about forty members of the Whispering Drays arrive at your spire a few days after the Summer Solstice. They explain that about twenty of them will be able to stay for the full three months, but the remaining score will be relieved in a month by a further twenty and will then return to their work in Brocéliande. The group is about four-fifths consisting of briars and the others bare other lineages.

They are quiet and reserved guests who try to learn as much of Urizen as they can. They are prone to sudden outbursts, as is common to briars, but they otherwise try to impress you with good behaviour. After a month, another twenty arrive and replace half of the original guests, who return to Brocéliande. This group stay for a month and are then replaced by another group of twenty. In total, eighty Whispering Dray stay at the spire with twenty of them (who include Sayer and Dwyn who brokered the arrangement) staying for the full three months.
