The Equinox has come, and it is time for your challenge.

Barien has chosen his champion – it is part of another challenge.

Dinand Umshall, a trader of the Sarcophan Delves who calls himself “the greatest Imperial Wordsmith of Sarcophan” has been challenged to “Journey to Anvil in Casinean, find and compete against the Suaq master of rhymes. Speak only in Imperial until you return”

We have been watching his progress, and think he will reach Anvil by around a quarter to eight on the Saturday evening of the Solstice. He will then need a little time to find you in Wintermark – so we suggest you plan to gather your audience for around 8pm in the venue of your choice. A colleague of mine will aim to join you and bring a little summer vis in case you need to pay for the space you decide to use.

Gather as few or as many spectators as please you.

I hear you have already done well and battled a Herald of Sadogua. Will you weave some of their insults into your rhymes?

I hope you will enjoy speaking with visitors to Anvil about the Sarcophan Delves to hone your insults to suit, and that you will enjoy the battle – which will be – as you requested – of rhyming insults. Any other terms I leave you to agree on the day
