

Over the last season, you have noticed portents around you. It is at night when you notice it the most, the sign of the Phoenix clear in the sky above Wintermark. This sign is the symbol of transformation of the self through learning, wisdom and understanding.

It is the phoenix that seems to guide what you see, an egg hatching late in a nest, a flower emerging from bud, the signs of transformation are clear wherever you look.

You find the Phoenix affecting you, feeling energised as you see the sign in the sky and filling you with an energy and drive.

As you have travelled to Anvil, you have not seen the sign of the Phoenix in the night sky. In fact, as you left Wintermark your connection to this sign seems to fade, which is quite disconcerting.

In anvil itself the signs are quite the opposite. A cocoon that has never hatched, young birds that have never emerged from their eggs. Something stagnant seems to be about, quite different to the energy that you felt when you were home.
