

To Bloodcrow Akka, of the Coven of the Free-Beating Hearts,

Your letter has been warmly received. In short: Yes, we agree with your concerns.

The Synod's approach to incorporating new aspects of Doctrine is overall meaningless, given their approach to moral superiority. They simply do not realise that true transcendence requires the individual to embrace their destiny without the constraints of a bunch of unknown priests telling them how to live their lives. If your actions destabilise one or more Assemblies, so much the better.

*Obviously, your souls do not reincarnate - but you also have a form of transcendence, do you not? As I understand it, orcish souls that transcend this life cross the Abyss and become your ancestors - and those that fail to do so fall in and are never heard from again.
Thus, we walk a similar path despite the differences of our species.*

*Assuming you agree with this sentiment, we would be very interested in further discussions - if not a face-to-face meeting. But not yet - let us see how your current projects proceed first. Remember our advice around curses
- they are some of our greatest weapons against oppressors.*

We will speak soon.

Valdr
