

Vaan of Urizen

I write words at the will of the Strategos, who is called Zakalwe. A courier will carry these words across the shore between the realm and the world, and you will read them.

My captain wishes to speak with you, and offers an opportunity to meet him for discourse and perhaps a game of strategy.

Such an opportunity presents itself between the hours of half-past five and six-o'clock on Saturday, during the Summer Solstice. An envoy will be in the Hall Between Worlds to meet you and ferry you across the Gulf to a place Between where the General of Day can meet with you.

If you wish, you might bring with you an aide or an ally – or at most two – but it is you that Zakalwe most wishes to speak to.

The Weapon Wise also requests that you bring with you the text for the magical rite that Imperial magicians have caused “Feudal Archive of Zakalwe” so that he might examine it.

I write words at the will of the Strategos, who is called Zakalwe. A courier will carry these words across the shore between the realm and the world, and you will read them.

My captain wishes to request your assistance, both as Archmage and as Navarr. He wishes to speak to certain Imperial soldiers who are not themselves magicians. He wishes to enlist your aid in bringing them to him during the Saturday of the Summer Solstice.

Between the hours of six-o-clock and half-past-six on Saturday, he wishes to speak to certain sentinels of Urizen. They are called Tanwyn Ankarien, Vulpes of Endsmeet, Priscus of the Citadel of the Blazing Wind, and Vitellius of the Banner of the Phoenix. As sentinels, and soldiers, it is possible that they will lack the ability to cross the gulfs. The General of Day asks that you offer them your assistance; there are both crafted items and ritual magics that can be used to bring them safely to the Hall between Worlds.

There is also a meeting that is arranged to take place between half-past-six and seven-o-clock, during which Zakalwe wishes to meet with the master magicians of the Empire. This would be yourself, the Warmage and the Grandmaster of the Rod and Shield. I have composed and dispatched letters to those individuals but it may be that those titles have changed hands before the audience. The Captain asks that you ensure that those who have taken up these titles know about these invitations. You are invited to come regardless of whether you are still Archmage or not.

Finally, there is a meeting between seven-o-clock and half-past-seven which presents a similar problem to the earlier one. The Master Strategist wishes to speak to Gabriel Barossa of the Company of the Red Fox, who is General of the Wolves of War; and Vanhe Korppi of the Sussivari Oathsword Fyrd, who has ambitions for the Imperial Throne. The Strategos wishes to speak to these two, together, between seven-o-clock and half-past-seven, but has no information as to whether they can pass the gulf.

In each case, an envoy will be in the Hall Between Worlds to meet these guests and ferry you across the Gulf to a place Between where the General of Day can meet with them.
